Going troppo

Who would have thought our favourite summer cocktail would inspire a body range, but the fresh and zingy scent of mint and lime turns out to be a refreshing treat in The Body Shop's limited-edition Virgin Mojito body range, priced from $16.50. I love the retro vibe of the Sugar Baby tanning range and the coconut oil, aloe vera and goji berry-infused Instant Self Tan Mousse, $27.99. Even grooming routines can be given a holiday feel. Swimwear label We Are Handsome has teamed up with Manicare for an exotic limited-edition collection of beauty tools, from nails files to tweezers, priced from $1.99. Finally, what could be more tropical than pineapple-scented hair?

The Pure Fiji Coconut Milk Shampoo and Conditioner Pineapple Infusion, $25.50 each, uses natural coconut cleansers to purify, and the conditioner can even be left in to tame flyaway hair or define curls.

WATER WORKS

The watery consistency of some beauty products belies how effectively they work. Here are some examples...
FOR CLEANSING: It literally looks like a bottle of water, but unlike regular H₂O, the micelle technology in cleansing water act like a magnet to get rid of dirt and make-up in one sweep of a cotton pad. Nivea's new Micellar Water, $11.59, is suitable for sensitive skin, and because you don't need to rinse after using this type of cleanser, we think it would make the perfect camping companion.
FOR MAKE-UP: Over summer, try switching heavy foundation for lightweight coverage like Smashbox Camera Ready BB Water, $75. This one has multiple benefits - delivering a long-wearing, demi-matte coverage, hydration and SPF 30 in one hit. A couple of drops will lightly blur over imperfections, but add more if you prefer a fuller coverage.

BEAUTY ED'S PICK OF THE WEEK
If you're a camellia enthusiast, you just might like the Shiseido Factive Camellia palette, $89. As well as providing the decoration for what must be the prettiest compact, the many colours of the palette are the inspiration can be used on the eyes as shadow, and on the face as a pretty blush.
